1877.
PREFACE.

In presenting this our first volume of the "Belleville City Directory" to the citizens of Belleville, we beg to express our thanks and obligations for the uniform kindness and prompt assistance we have met with from the people generally. The work contains a complete Alphabetical list of all residents over eighteen years of age, with the exception of ladies who have no profession. It also contains a full classified list of every business.

In addition we have appended a Directory of West Belleville, and a Street Guide of Belleville proper.

In preparing this volume we have used every effort, and observed the greatest care in compilation, to ensure a reliable work.

BELLEVILLE.

Histories of both the county of St. Clair and the city of Belleville have so recently been published in one form or other, that to take up the matter here in detail, would be but a mere repetition of a well-worn subject.

Further, the major portion of the inhabitants have either been born here or were located in the town previous to its incorporation, and consequently are better informed as to its rise and progress than we, the publishers, shall presume to be.
POPULATION.

Belleville.—In the year 1850, the date of its incorporation as a city, the population was estimated at 4,000 all told. At the present time, according to our usual mode of computing the population of cities by directory statistics, the city contains 11,000 souls.

West Belleville.—Our estimates of the population of this village give it 1,960 inhabitants.

Very obediently,

MURPHY & CO.,

Publishers.
